90-DAY

Quote Journal

ONE QUOTE, ONE PROMPT, ONE PAGE A DAY

Ninety quotes, ninety short prompts, ninety pages to write on.
Read the quote. Answer the prompt in your own words. Keep the page.

This journal belongs to _____

A journal, not safety, medical or professional advice. For anything involving gas, electricity, water or medication, follow your supplier, your building manager or the relevant authority.

Interior designed by MicroVenture Labs.

DAY 01

A plan you have never practiced is a wish with bullet points.

WRITE

Name the step in your plan you have never once tried, and why you have put it off.

DAY 02

The cheapest water you will ever store is the water already in your pipes.

WRITE

Write how many containers you own that could hold water, and where they are now.

DAY 03

Nobody panics about the thing they already know how to do.

WRITE

Name one person you would want beside you on a bad night, and say why.

DAY 04

Count how many steps from your door to the stairwell in the dark tonight.

WRITE

Write where you would stop to rest on the way down, and who you would meet there.

DAY 05

Store water where you will still be able to reach it when you are tired.

WRITE

Write where the largest container sits now, and what you would have to move to reach it.

DAY 06

Write down how much water your household actually drinks in a normal week.

WRITE

Name the store you would go to first, and how far it is on foot.

DAY 07

A pantry you cannot cook from is storage, not food.

WRITE

Write what your household would eat on a bad night, and who would refuse it.

DAY 08

Buy the food you already eat, then eat it and buy it again.

WRITE

List the three things you would notice missing first, and where you would get them.

DAY 09

Know which room in your apartment stays warmest before you need to know it.

WRITE

Write which room you would sleep in if the heat went off for three nights, and who would sleep there with you.

DAY 10

Blankets work better than bravado when the heat goes off on a cold night.

WRITE

Write how many people sleep in your home, and what each one would put on.

DAY 11

A flashlight you cannot find in the dark is a flashlight you do not own.

WRITE

Write the last time you needed a light in the dark, and what you used instead.

DAY 12

Charge the things you would miss first, not the things you use most.

WRITE

Name the one device you would give up first, and what you would lose with it.

DAY 13

Keep copies of your papers somewhere that is not your only apartment.

WRITE

Write where the second set of papers is kept, and who else has been told.

DAY 14

A document you cannot find is the same as a document you never had.

WRITE

Write the one paper you would hate to lose, and where you last saw it.

DAY 15

A list of what your parent takes is worth more than a guess at a pharmacy.

WRITE

Name your parent's doctor, and the day you last spoke to them.

DAY 16

Keep the medication list where the ambulance crew would look, not in a drawer.

WRITE

Write which door a stranger would try first in your home, and why that one.

DAY 17

The neighbor who knows your name is worth more than a full cabinet.

WRITE

Write the name of the person across the hall, and one thing they would need from you.

DAY 18

Introduce yourself to the person across the hall before something goes wrong.

WRITE

Write what you would say in the first ten seconds, word for word.

DAY 19

Know where the breaker box is and which switch turns off the whole apartment.

WRITE

Write who would do it if you were away, and the day you showed them.

DAY 20

A drill that takes an evening is cheaper than a week of learning in the dark.

WRITE

Write who would take part in it, and how long it would run.

DAY 21

Keep a small amount of cash at home in bills you can actually spend.

WRITE

Write the smallest bill you would accept, and what you would refuse to pay for.

DAY 22

Cards fail when the network fails, and the line at the ATM will be long.

WRITE

Name one store that would take cash only, and how you know.

DAY 23

You will make worse decisions tired, so protect the sleep you can get.

WRITE

Write the hour you would stop making decisions, and who would take over.

DAY 24

Think about the toilet before it stops flushing, not after.

WRITE

Write what you would use instead, and where it is kept right now.

DAY 25

Children cope better with a plan they helped make than one handed to them.

WRITE

Write the day you would sit down with them, and who else would be in the room.

DAY 26

Give a child a job in a hard week and they stop being only frightened.

WRITE

Write the age of each child in your home, and the job that fits each one.

DAY 27

Ask your parent what they would do if the elevator stopped working today.

WRITE

Write who would go up to your parent first, and how long it would take them to get there.

DAY 28

An older parent on the fourth floor has a different plan from yours.

WRITE

Write what you would pack for them, and who would bring it up.

DAY 29

Agree on one person outside the city who everyone will call.

WRITE

Write their name, their number, and the hour they are easiest to reach.

DAY 30

Text messages back up and phone calls fail, so have more than one route.

WRITE

Write the second route you would try, and who owns that account.

DAY 31

Learn where the water shut-off valve is before it is spraying the hall.

WRITE

Write who you would call first, and the words you would use.

DAY 32

Know how to open your own front door when the lock will not turn.

WRITE

Write where you would go if you had to leave the door open all night, and who you would tell.

DAY 33

A hand-crank radio is only useful if you know which station to find.

WRITE

Write the two stations you would try, and the time of day you would try them.

DAY 34

Fill the freezer with ice now and it will keep food cold later.

WRITE

Name a neighbor with a freezer you could share, and what you would offer them.

DAY 35

Cook once, portion twice, and the freezer becomes your second pantry.

WRITE

Write how many portions your largest pot holds, and who would eat the last one.

DAY 36

Some medicine has to stay cold, so know your plan before the fridge stops.

WRITE

Write the name of the pharmacy that fills the prescription, and the hour it opens.

DAY 37

The bag by the door should be small enough to carry down four flights.

WRITE

Write the weight of your bag, and the item you would leave out to make it lighter.

DAY 38

Write the plan down because you will not remember it under pressure.

WRITE

Write the one sentence you would want a stranger to read first.

DAY 39

A list on your phone dies with the battery, so keep paper too.

WRITE

Write the three things you would copy by hand tonight, and where they would go.

DAY 40

Check your smoke detector batteries on a date you will not forget.

WRITE

Write how many alarms your home has, and which one you cannot reach.

DAY 41

Learn to shut off the gas yourself, and know when to leave it alone.

WRITE

Write what you would do instead of touching it, and who you would call.

DAY 42

Sort your kitchen into food that needs power and food that does not.

WRITE

Write where you would put the second pile, and how you would label it.

DAY 43

Buy the manual can opener, because the electric one only works sometimes.

WRITE

Name the store that sells one, and the day you would go.

DAY 44

Keep a pair of shoes by the bed that you could walk a mile in.

WRITE

Write what you would put beside them so you could dress in the dark.

DAY 45

A phone with no charge is a paperweight with a screen and a battery.

WRITE

Write the number you would have to remember if the screen went black, and why that one.

DAY 46

Keep a spare charger and a power bank where you sleep, not where you work.

WRITE

Write how many charges your bank holds, and which device you would charge last.

DAY 47

Write down the three things you would take, then check the list honestly.

WRITE

Name the person who would carry your bag if you could not, and where they live.

DAY 48

A neighbor with a spare key is a plan; a spare key under a mat is a hope.

WRITE

Write who holds your key now, and who you would ask if they said no.

DAY 49

Learn the sound your building makes when the power goes out.

WRITE

Write the three sounds you heard, and which one you could not place.

DAY 50

Keep a paper map of your own neighborhood, because you know it less well than you think.

WRITE

Write the name of the street behind yours, and what is on it.

DAY 51

Keep the heavy bottles low and reachable, where a leak will not ruin everything.

WRITE

Write what sits above your storage now, and where it would go.

DAY 52

Sit for a minute with the lights off and the elevator out of order.

WRITE

Write the one job you could not finish in the dark, and who could finish it.

DAY 53

Know how your city warns you when something big happens nearby.

WRITE

Write the last warning you received, and what you did about it.

DAY 54

Keep the children's shoes and coats together so a cold exit is fast.

WRITE

Write the size each child wears now, and the day you last checked.

DAY 55

A written plan with names on it is a plan; the rest is a mood.

WRITE

Write the name beside each job, and the one job nobody has taken.

DAY 56

Check the expiration dates on the food you are keeping for an emergency.

WRITE

Write the three oldest items you found, and what you did with each.

DAY 57

Give every adult in the apartment the same information, not slightly different versions.

WRITE

Write who you would tell first, and the one thing they must remember.

DAY 58

An emergency contact should be someone who answers on the first ring.

WRITE

Name your backup contact, and why you chose them over the first.

DAY 59

Know how long the water in your water heater tank will last without power.

WRITE

Write the date the water heater was last maintained, and the name of the technician.

DAY 60

A blanket, a flashlight and a radio will solve more nights than anything you can buy.

WRITE

Write the one thing you would add to that pile, and why it is missing.

DAY 61

Ask the pharmacy how they would reach you if their systems went down.

WRITE

Name a second pharmacy, and how far it is from the first.

DAY 62

Keep the important numbers on a card in your wallet, not only in your phone.

WRITE

Write where your wallet is at this moment, and what is in it.

DAY 63

Never burn fuel indoors — no camping stove, no charcoal, no generator in a stairwell or on a balcony.

WRITE

Write the outdoor spot you would use, and how you would keep it dry.

DAY 64

Learn which of your neighbors has a car and which would need a lift.

WRITE

Name the neighbor with the largest vehicle, and what you could offer in return.

DAY 65

A household that has talked about the hard week handles it better.

WRITE

Write the three questions you would ask at the table, and who would answer each.

DAY 66

Keep the trash can empty and the sink clear, because mess makes every problem worse.

WRITE

Write what you would clear first, and who would help you clear it.

DAY 67

Check that the can opener still works before the night you need it.

WRITE

Name the person who last used it, and the day they did.

DAY 68

Check the date on your batteries before you trust them, then test them.

WRITE

Write which devices in your home take batteries, and which ones you would miss.

DAY 69

Learn which faucets in your apartment still run when the water pressure drops.

WRITE

Write which faucet you would fill from first, and how long one pot takes.

DAY 70

Write the plan for the person who is not you, because you may not be home.

WRITE

Write the three things a stranger would not know about your home.

DAY 71

A child who knows what happens next is easier to calm than one who does not.

WRITE

Write the words you would use to explain it, and the first question they would ask.

DAY 72

Keep one warm layer per person where you sleep, not in the hallway closet.

WRITE

Write the name of each person and the layer they would need most.

DAY 73

Keep a little cash where you can reach it without power or a network.

WRITE

Write how much you would keep at home, and who else knows.

DAY 74

Check what your insurance covers before you need to make a claim.

WRITE

Write what your policy leaves out, and the day it renews.

DAY 75

A phone tree with three names on it beats a group chat in a crisis.

WRITE

Write who calls whom if the first number does not answer.

DAY 76

Learn how to turn your phone into a hotspot before the wifi dies.

WRITE

Write the name of the network you would borrow, and whose password you would need.

DAY 77

Keep a written list of what is in the freezer, because a cold box hides things.

WRITE

Write what you would save first if it started to thaw, and what you would let go.

DAY 78

A quiet household is not a prepared one; check the things nobody has touched.

WRITE

Write the one cabinet you have never opened, and what you expect is in it.

DAY 79

Walk down the stairs once carrying what you would actually carry.

WRITE

Write what you would take on the second trip, and what would stay.

DAY 80

Keep one folder for everyone's health paperwork and label it clearly.

WRITE

Write what goes in it first, and who else needs a copy.

DAY 81

Ring the doorbell of the person who lives alone and ask if they are all right.

WRITE

Write their name, their door number, and one thing they need.

DAY 82

Preparedness is mostly knowing where things are and who to call.

WRITE

Write the one thing you could not find in under a minute, and where it turned out to be.

DAY 83

A plan that depends on one person is a single point of failure.

WRITE

Write the name of that person, and the second name you would add.

DAY 84

Write down what you would do first, second and third, then argue with it.

WRITE

Write the strongest objection to your own plan, and who would raise it.

DAY 85

Fix one light to the wall where your hand already goes in the dark.

WRITE

Write which wall, and what you would need to put it there.

DAY 86

Learn the difference between a problem you can fix and one you should leave.

WRITE

Write the one job you would not start yourself, and who you would pay to do it.

DAY 87

Keep the hallway clear, because the exit is the part you cannot replace.

WRITE

Write what is in the way now, and who put it there.

DAY 88

A household budget that ignores the odd week is a budget for good weather.

WRITE

Write the figure you could set aside each month, and what it would cover.

DAY 89

Teach the children how to call for help and what to say when they do.

WRITE

Write the address a child would have to say out loud, and whether they can.

DAY 90

The point of a plan is not to be ready for everything, only for the first hour.

WRITE

Write what you would do in the second hour, and who would be in charge.